How to Hide an Empire with Daniel Immerwahr, Ph.D

Daniel Immerwahr, Ph.D. is an Associate Professor at Northwestern, specializing in twentieth-century U.S. history within a global context. His first book, Thinking Small, offers a critical account of grassroots development campaigns launched by the United States at home and abroad. His second book, How to Hide an Empire, is about the United States' overseas territories. At Northwestern, he teaches courses of U.S. foreign relations, global history, intellectual history, and the history of capitalism.

This is an opportunity to learn about the world we travel from a different perspective.
