From Local Farms to Urban Tables

Margot Zuckerman, our 2017 Circumnavigator Scholar, presents the results of her round the world research project examining how the various local food systems have been developed to foster urban food security. Margot traveled to Uganda, Italy, Hungary, Japan, Singapore, Australia and Argentina during her study. Margot, a lifelong “foodie” and environmentalist, is a senior at Northwestern’s Weinberg School majoring in Environmental Sciences and Economics. The Uncommon Ground is the nation’s 1st certified rooftop farm and weather permitting will open up the roof area for our inspection.
